Project Title: Exploring the experiences of Māori cancer nurses

Student Researcher: Stella Williams-Terei

Research Supervisor: Coral Wiapo

Research Supervisor: Professor Terryann Clarke

It is important that Māori cancer nurses' voices and perspectives are heard, so we have a deeper understanding of Māori nurses' role in providing clinical and cultural support to Māori cancer patients, to address inequity, and broaden and strengthen literature.

To fulfil the requirements of a Masters research project I am seeking between 6-12 participants who:

- Whakapapa Māori
- Registered nurse (excluding EN and NP) based in a hospital or clinical setting
- Providing cancer care services, coordination or navigation to Māori cancer patients and whanau

I would like to invite you to take part in a kanohi ki te kanohi interview, using kaupapa Māori principles. The interview will be via Zoom at a time that suits you, and will take approximately 60 minutes. We will open and close the hui with karakia, whanaungatanga and then I will invite you to answer semi-structured questions relating to your role as a Māori nurse caring for whanau Māori with cancer. There will be time before the interview to ask any questions about the interview, information sheet or signing the consent form.

The interview will be audio-recorded and from your answers, the information will be transcribed, checked, analysed and written up as a Masters 90-point thesis. You will have the opportunity to check your transcription to ensure I am representing your views and perspectives correctly.

Participants will receive a taonga koha (to the value of $100) for participating, noting that participation is voluntary and can withdraw at any time.

Researcher Contact Details: If you have any questions or would like to take part in the study, you can contact me at any time. Email: swil827@aucklanduni.ac.nz or mobile 021 249 4434.

Confidentiality of participant details and anonymity of experiences shared will be maintained.
